Experience:

Una Clancy, a native of Northern Ireland, has over 28 years of riding experience, 17 years of which she has spent teaching. She mostly worked on arena show jumping before leaving Ireland. From 1996 to 2000 she lived in Portugal where she trained with Jorge Armas. She worked with young Lusitano stallions, preparing them for dressage work from basic skills through high school movements. After moving to Hawaii and California, she returned to Portugal in 2005 to work with Joao Carlos Pamplona who breeds and trains Arab Lusitano crosses for Portugese working Disciplines. However, most recently she has been concentrating on competition Dressage.

Una had the good fortune to take lessons with Joao Olivera in 2003 when he was based in Malibu, California. She has also ridden with Jec Aristole Ballou, author of "101 Dressage Exercises for the Horse and Rider."

Una has given clinics in Hawaii, California, and Georgia. She will be living in Ohio for the next several years and will continue to give clinics for her friends in Georgia and Florida.

Philosophy:

Una teaches dressage and jumping as well as general riding skills, and horse care. She feels a rider should have a confident seat and relationship with their horse before advancing to specific disciplines. Most Europeans learn to ride before deciding which disciplines are best suited to them and a balanced seat is the key to all good riding. She is a firm believer that people should enjoy their riding and always remember why they want to ride these wonderful creatures.
